

BUZZBAIT BASICS

It's Spring Time... and water temps are climbing. This means the big bass are moving toward shallow water so they can feed hard before the spawn. When the water temp hits 60 degrees, I like to start throwing a buzzbait. Often anglers will throw them during the summer. When bass are feeding small fish, they overlook the buzzbait in the spring, even ones who throw shallow; buzzbaits draw vicious strikes and seldom catch

Location The main areas I look for when throwing a buzzbait are the ditches leading up to spawning flats. The flats themselves work well when there is grass, lily pads, or wood cover available. Also, don't forget the back of pockets and creeks.

Gear My go to set up when I'm throwing a buzzbait is: Rod-7ft to a 7'3" Medium Heavy Action Enigma HPT, Reel-Abu Garcia Revo Sx 6.4:1 gear ratio, and Line-20 lb K9 Fishing Fluorocarbon.

Bait My bait of choice is an RBT Road Runner from RBT Custom Baits. Unlike a majority of buzzbaits on the market the Road Runner doesn't sink fast at the end of the cast, it immediately rises to the top with a great strike inducing sound. Another unique quality of the Road Runner is in the skirt. It is made of hair and feathers; which help it stay up on slower retrieves.

Check out the RBT Road Runner or any of the other great products RBT Custom Baits has to offer by finding them on Facebook and Instagram. Make sure to give them a LIKE. Ron Weimer of RBT Custom Bait is a great guy to deal with and is quick to respond to messages.

Hope these tips help you catch more fish on a buzzbait. When you do; feel free to share your pictures with OneObjective. Email pictures to oneobjectivebf@gmail.com or message them to us on Facebook or Instagram.
